

Amendment to the Specification:

Please replace the paragraph beginning on page 1, line 7 with:

For purposes of this ~~patent~~ disclosure, contact current is defined as the current that flows in an animal or human subject when the subject touches (contacts) two different electrically conductive points in the subject's environment. Different conductive points with different voltage potentials cause current to flow in the living body.